

LEO

Leo the Light-Up Firefly

A StorySprout Press Book

When the sun went down over the Whisper Meadow, the magic began.

Blink! Flash! Glow! All the fireflies started their nighttime dance.

Leo tried as hard as he could. He squeezed his eyes shut. He held his breath.

But Leo didn't blink. Leo didn't flash. Leo stayed dark.

"What's wrong, Leo?" asked Luna, zipping down beside him. Her light was as bright as a

"I'm broken, Luna," Leo whispered. "I don't have a light like everyone else."

Bella the Beetle waved an antenna. "Everyone has something special, Leo. Maybe your light."

"Let's ask Grandfather Glow," Luna suggested. They flew toward the Great Mushroom.

Grandfather Glow sat on top of the tallest mushroom. He listened to Leo's story.

"A light that flashes is for finding friends," the old firefly said. "But there are many kinds of light."

Leo still felt sad. As they flew home, they heard a tiny, shivering sound.

It was Barnaby the Baby Bunny. He was lost in the thorns and very scared.

"We'll help you!" cried the other fireflies. They flew into the bushes, flashing their bright light.

Flash! Flash! Flash! But the light was too fast. It made the shadows jump, and Barnaby

"Stop!" Leo cried. "You're scaring him!" Leo landed right in front of the bunny.

Leo didn't try to flash. Instead, he thought about a warm, cozy campfire. He started to hum

Slowly, Leo's tail began to shine. It wasn't a flash. It was a steady, warm, golden glow.

It was like a tiny nightlight. Barnaby the Bunny stopped shivering. He looked at Leo and fe

"Follow me," Leo said gently. He stayed close to the ground, lighting the way through the grass.

Bella the Beetle helped move the leaves. "Go this way, Barnaby!" she called.

Soon, they found the bunny's burrow. His mother was waiting for him.

"Leo's light stayed on!" Luna cheered. "He has a lantern-light!"

Leo felt a warm glow in his heart. He wasn't broken at all. He had a special light that could

About the Story

Leo the firefly can't flash like his friends. Feeling broken, he learns that his gentle, steady glow is exactly what's needed when a lost bunny needs help.

A heartwarming story about finding your unique light.

Ages 2-6 | StorySprout Press

StorySprout Press